The abcs of death 2.5

Score: 5.5/10 Length: 85 Rating: NR Language: English Categories: 2000s, recent, anthology, murderer, alien, monster, zombie, devil, vampire, horror comedy, holiday, gore porn Another film of shorts! This one, brought to you by the letter ‘M’. Because I guess they had a lot of ‘M’ entries. I love anthologies because there is always something for everyone but I really could have done without the scratchy title music. For this review, I’ve decided to give each segment a grade and just a quickie synopsis of a few words. Magnetic Tape – Silly, gory, nerd fun. (B) Maieusiophobia – Terrifying waxmation birth. (A) Mailbox – Skippable vampire trick-or-treat. (C) Make Believe – Mediocre murder and kid fairies. (c) Malnutrition – A well-done zombie segment. (A) Manure – A memorable, May-like poop monster. (A) Marauder – A hipstertastic black and white tricycle race. (B) Mariachi – Murders in a death metal music video. (C) Marriage – A creative and captivating therapy session with a surprise ending. (A) Martyr – A cult ritual that I could have sacrificed. (C) Matador – A sick and twisted gorefest of intensity. (A) Meat – A dark meatmation segment that is unique and thought-provoking. (A) Mermaid – A stupid mermaid meal. (C) Merry Christmas – Krampus feels bad for himself with a prisoner who has a face for acting. (C) Mess – Oh God, why. You deserve to know now that ‘the mess’ is water poop coming from a belly button. (C for can’t. I can’t.) Messiah – A woman is captured by masked forest-people. (A) Mind Meld – A clever, gory experiment. (A) Miracle – Well, it’s about box… it was too short and quick for me to comprehend anything else. (B) Mobile – A man gets torture text instructions with a twist. (A) Mom – A light zombie-kid romance. (B) Moonstruck – An unexpected paper cartoon about romance, betrayal, revenge, and death. (A) Mormon Missionaries – An encounter with two missionaries takes a turn for the worst. And then it gets worse. (A) Mother – A giant CGI spider. (C) Muff – A hilarious hotel sex encounter goes fatally wrong. (B) Munging – Gross and awful topic, but the corpse’s make-up was great. (B) Mutant – Eager losers shoot at flying mutants that break out of people’s faces. It was good until the the first bat was revealed, and then it got really bad. (C) Love ’em or hate ’em, the anthology series ABCs of Death has always been about showcasing upcoming horror filmmakers. They’ve launched multiple competitions for aspiring filmmakers to have their short featured in the final film. One of which was a competition for the letter ‘M,’ which saw Robert Boocheck’s winning entry “M is for Masticate” featured in ABC’s of Death 2. The competition proved fierce, though, and 26 finalists were selected to have their shorts featured in ABC’s of Death 2.5: World Competition Edition. That’s 85 more minutes of humor, gore, and pure batshit insanity for warped minds. To give you a tease, here are the segment titles and filmmakers that made the cut: M is for Magnetic Tape // Tim Rutherford & Cody Kennedy M is for Maieusiophobia // Christopher Younes M is for Mailbox // Dante Vescio & Rodrigo Gasparini M is for Make Believe // Summer Johnson M is for Malnutrition // Peter Czikrai M is for Manure // Michael Schwartz M is for Marauder // Steve Johnson M is for Mariachi // Eric Pennycoff M is for Marriage // Todd E. Freeman M is for Martyr // Jeff Stewart M is for Matador // Gigi Saul Guerrero M is for Meat // Wolfgang Matzl M is for Mermaid // Ama Lea M is for Merry Christmas // Joe & Lloyd Stas M is for Mess // Carlos Faria M is for Messiah // Nicholas Humphries M is for Mind Meld // BC Glassberg M is for Miracle // Álvaro Núñez M is for Mobile // Barış Erdoğan M is for Mom // Carles Torrens M is for Moonstruck // Travis Betz M is for Mormon Missionaries // Peter Podgursky M is for Mother // Ryan Bosworth M is for Muff // Mia’Kate Russell M is for Munging // Jason Koch & Clint Kelly M is for Mutant // Stuart Simpson Releasing exclusively on Vimeo, you can pre-order the film here. You don’t have to even wait very long. ABC’s of Death 2.5 will be available on Vimeo next Tuesday, August 2nd, 2016. Today’s news is brought to you by the letter ‘M.’ The series, known for its anarchically alphabet-themed anthology of short films, launched a “Filmmaker Frenzy” competition for the segment devoted to the letter M-–collecting more than five hundred, three minute-long entries from over forty countries in the process-–including Robert Boocheck’s winning entry “M is for Masticate” featured in ABC’s of Death 2. ABC’s of Death 2 ½ showcases an additional top 26 finalists, providing fans 85 minutes of unadulterated madness and plenty more new nightmare fuel to tide them over until the next numbered segment in the series. MY CALL: This really wasn’t a very good horror anthology unless you’re looking for slapstick drunk/high humor told over sexual and “dark genre” themes. There’s not much horror to be found here…nor quality. MORE MOVIES LIKE The ABCs of Death 2.5: The ABCs of Death (2013) and The ABCs of Death 2 (2014), both of which also feature 26 very short films by 26 different filmmakers and both of which were better than 2.5. MORE HORROR ANTHOLOGIES: Dead of Night (1945), Black Sabbath (1963), Tales from the Crypt (1972), The Vault of Horror (1973), The Uncanny (1977), Creepshow (1982), Twilight Zone: The Movie (1983), Stephen King’s Cat’s Eye (1985), Deadtime Stories (1986), Creepshow 2 (1987), Tales from the Darkside: The Movie (1990), Necronomicon: Book of the Dead (1993), Hellraiser: Bloodline (1996), Campfire Tales (1997), 3 Extremes (2004), Creepshow 3 (2006), Trick ’r Treat (2007), Chillerama (2011), Little Deaths (2011), V/H/S (2012), The Theater Bizarre (2012), The ABCs of Death (2013), V/H/S 2 (2013), The Profane Exhibit (2013), The ABCs of Death 2 (2014), V/H/S Viral (2014), Southbound (2015), Tales of Halloween (2015), A Christmas Horror Story (2015), Holidays (2016) and XX (2017). If you’ve followed my reviews for a while now then you ought to know that I love horror anthologies. In some anthologies all of the short stories are directed by one person and written by another (e.g., Creepshow), other times we have three to six films (20-30 min each) each crafted by different filmmakers (e.g., V/H/S), but in this case each of our 26 short stories has a different writer and director. In fact, these were the 26 runners-up The ABCs of Death 2 (2014), for which each submission had to be titled by the letter “M.” Unlike many anthologies which feature a story teller or wraparound story (e.g., Creepshow, Tales from the Darkside: The Movie) or taking the approach of linked stories in which one component of the previous story links us to the next (e.g., Southbound, Trick ’r Treat), this anthology simply delivers a series of horror shorts related only by the first letter of their titles. This is a cool notion and all, but realize that out of the top 52 submissions, these were numbers 27 to 52 whereas the best 26 made it into the previous anthology (The ABCs of Death 2). Also, a bit strange is that there is little horror to be found here. Mostly these films are very dark comedies. In fact, this would best be advertised as a “dark genre anthology.” As I watched, I gave each 3-minute short film a “gut response” rating of 1 to 3 (3 being best, 1 being worst; sadly, there are a lot of 1s). These short films cover a variety of horror, genre, and sexual themes including vampires, decapitation, cross dressing, maggots on wounds, an elderly Van Helsing, mutant ninjas, dismemberment, guts, a VHS-cyborg samurai, a poop golem, bile, vomit, sex scenes, perversions, boobs, full frontal nudity, mass suicide, genital mutilation, necrophilia, oral sex gone wrong, and some others I’m sure I’ve forgotten. There are several foreign language shorts, including Spanish and (I think) Italian. With as little spoiling as possible, here is an account of the short films with a few comments. M is for Moonstruck [2.5] (directed by Travis Betz) boasts some innovative (even if cheap) style! It’s cut paper animation…with a cut paper sex scene and cut paper nudity! LOL. M is for Mother [2.5] (directed by Ryan Bosworth) is pure cheesy fun, complete with a great title shot and a fun CGI spider. M is for Malnutrition [2] (directed by Peter Czikrai) is a barely serviceable zombie film. M is for Marauder [1] (directed by Steve Daniels) is a garbage pail film about adults trying to kill each other while riding Big Wheels. Some will find this hilarious. I found it a bit annoying. Watch it with friends and beer and you’ll get a few chuckles. M is for Mobile [1.5] (directed by Baris Erdogan) features torture via text. It’s cheeky. M is for Mess [2] (directed by Carlos Faria) sexually fetishizes a man’s curse of defecating through his bellybutton. Of course, it’s disgusting. M is for Marriage [3] (directed by Todd E. Freeman) is among the better produced, written and acted films. It involves some sort of pathogen…or parasite…or infection. M is for Mind Meld [1.5] (directed by Brett Glassberg) is about a volunteer for some really twisted scientific experiments. M is for Messiah [1] (directed by Nicholas Humphries) is a garbage pail film about a stupid cult. This was frustratingly bad. M is for Make Believe [1] (directed by Summer Johnson) is about some little girls giving horribly improper first aid to an impaled man costumed as the King of the Fairies. M is for Magnetic Tape [1] (directed by Cody Kennedy & Tim Rutherford) is dorky “stoner humor” full of dumb gore and inane dialogue. It’s funny, but terrible. What can I say about M is for Munging [1.5] (directed by Jason M. Koch & Clint Kelly)? This is exactly what you think it is. Exactly! M is for Mermaid [2] (directed by Ama Lea) is about a couple of fisherman who catch a topless mermaid, and it’s very silly. M is for Meat [2.5] (directed by Wolfgang Matzl) is a trippy little stop-motion film about a carnivorous chicken leg. Yes, I meant exactly what I just said. M is for Mariachi [1] (directed by Eric Pennycoff) features a death metal band with the best band name ever, a head banger, and a lot of murder. M is for Mormon Missionaries [2] (directed by Peter Podgursky) features pushy, homicidal Mormons…or does it? M is for Muff [2] (directed by Mia Kate Russell) is dumb, perversely funny, well-produced, and features a kinky accidental death. M is for Matador [3] (directed by Gigi Saul Guerrero) might have been the most unexpectedly pleasing film. It involves a sick game of dress-up, roleplay, and the revenge of some scantily clad, blood-covered women. M is for Manure [3] (directed by Michael Schwartz) is about a young man and his disgusting creation of vengeance. M is for Mutant [2] (directed by Stuart Simpson) is a slapstick Australian film about some virus that causes stop-motion face-bursting mutants monsters. It made me smile. M is for Merry Christmas [1] (directed by Joe Staszkiewicz) features a British Krampus with some self-doubt issues. M is for Martyr [1] (directed by Jeff Stewart) exhibits zero filmmaking effort and a marginally interesting concept. M is for Mom [2] (directed by Carles Torrens) is somewhat well done, and features a ghoulish child with a crush. The title seems a bit out of place. M is for Miracle [1.5] (directed by Alvaro Nunez) is about a rabbit that falls from the sky and a psychopath in a bunny suit. I have no clue how M is for Mailbox [2] (directed by Dante Vescio & Rodrigo Gasparini) got its name. This foreign language short features a creepy kid on Halloween. M is for Maieusiophobia [3] (directed by Christopher Younes), the fear of giving birth, features disturbing Claymation, gory guts, and a weird pregnancy. Well, there it is—a cornucopia of weirdness. I wouldn’t recommend this. There are too many good horror anthologies out there. This is NOT ABC’s of Death 3.
